the proportion of national income invested and financed by domestic savings would then increase, and the ratio of net foreign capital imports to additional investment would decline.