legs, neck and or brain (in infants and children) or within various body organs such as the liver.

there are no pathological conditions other than dehydration associated with a high albumin concentration.

while stimulants can result in greater awareness and energy, they can also cause the body temperature to dramatically rise and cause heart failure or seizure.