secondary hypertension describes a condition when a direct cause for hypertension can be identified (such as kidney disease or sleep apnea).